drawn up by the Permanent Bureau

Introduction

At its meeting of 1 to 3 April 2008, having regard to the Recommendation made by the Twenty-First Session of the Conference,¹ the Council on General Affairs and Policy of the Hague Conference invited the Permanent Bureau to prepare a questionnaire on the feasibility of developing a protocol to the Hague Convention of 23 November 2007 on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance ("the 2007 Child Support Convention") to deal with the international recovery of maintenance in respect of vulnerable persons. It was recommended and concluded that the responses should be submitted to the Special Commission on the implementation of that Convention² and a report made to the Council meeting of 2010.

This Questionnaire is addressed to all the Members of the Organisation as well as non-Member States of the Organisation that participated as Observers in the Twenty-First Session of the Hague Conference on Private International Law held in The Hague from 5 to 23 November 2007.

In view of the possible preparation of an analysis of the responses before the November 2009 Special Commission and in the light of a number of additional documents that will be distributed during the next three months for comments at different dates in September and October,³ the Permanent Bureau would very much appreciate receiving your response to this Questionnaire (in either English or French) before 24 July 2009. Answers should be sent via e-mail to < secretariat@hcch.net > with the following heading in the subject field: "Questionnaire – Vulnerable Persons Protocol – [name of the Member of the Organisation / non-Member State]".

Such a Protocol would complement and build upon the Hague Convention of 13 January 2000 on the International Protection of Adults."

² This Special Commission will take place in The Hague during the second and third weeks of November 2009. A convocation for the meeting with precise dates and a draft agenda will be sent in June 2009.

³ Such documents will include a draft Handbook for case workers on the operation of the 2007 Child Support Convention, a checklist for implementation, draft Recommended Forms, a draft Country Profile and preliminary documents on the development of iSupport, the international electronic case management and Internet based communication system in support of the 2007 Child Support Convention.

Background

The issue of the application of the 2007 Child Support Convention to vulnerable persons was raised during the Twenty-First Session of the Conference. According to some States, the 2007 Child Support Convention in its entirety should have been applicable on a mandatory basis to maintenance in respect of vulnerable persons. However, other States were not ready to accept this proposal without examining its full implication. There was not enough time to do so during the Session; which explains Recommendation No 9 of the Final Act of the Twenty-First Session.⁴

As an introduction to this Questionnaire it is necessary to explain the extent to which maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons:⁵ (A) are already included within the compulsory scope of the 2007 Child Support Convention; (B) may be brought within its scope by a declaration made by a Contracting State under Article 2(3); (C) cannot be brought within the scope of the Convention; and, (D) are not per se within the scope of the Hague Convention of 13 January 2000 on the International Protection of Adults ("the 2000 Adults Convention").

(A) Maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons which come within the compulsory scope of the Convention⁶

Where the vulnerable person is a child below the age of 21 years,⁷ maintenance obligations of a parent towards him or her come within the compulsory scope of the Convention by virtue of Article 2(1) a). The obligations arise from the parent / child relationship regardless of whether the child is or is not a vulnerable person.

Similarly where the vulnerable person is a spouse, maintenance obligations of the other spouse towards him or her come within the compulsory scope of the Convention if and when the conditions of Article 2(1) b) or c) are met. The obligations arise from the spousal relationship regardless of whether the spouse is or is not a vulnerable person.

There is only one case in which an obligation towards a vulnerable person as such comes within the compulsory scope of the Convention. The Convention provides in Article 37(3) that it shall apply, in the case of direct requests to competent authorities, "to a decision granting maintenance to a vulnerable person over the age specified in [Article 2(1) a)] where such decision was rendered before the person reached that age and provided for maintenance beyond that age by reason of the impairment".

(B) Maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons which may be brought within the scope of the Convention by Contracting States

A Contracting State may by declaration bring within the scope of the Convention (or any part of the Convention) any obligation towards a vulnerable person which arises from a family relationship, parentage, marriage or affinity. The following are some examples:

⁴ See, supra, note 1, for the text of Recommendation No 9.

⁶ It should be noted that the scope of the Hague Protocol of 23 November 2007 on the Law Applicable to Maintenance Obligations is broader than that of the Convention and that therefore the Protocol automatically applies to a broad range of maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons, in particular to any such obligations which arise "from a family relationship, parentage, marriage or affinity" (Art. 1(1)).

⁷ Or 18 years depending on whether a State has made a reservation in accordance with Art. 2(2).

- an obligation of a parent towards a child over the age of 21 years where impairment arises after that age;
- an obligation of a parent towards a child over the age of 21 years where an impairment and an obligation arise before that age in cases other than those covered by Article 37(3);
- an obligation of one spouse towards the other where that other spouse is a "vulnerable person" in cases other than those covered by Article 2(1) b) and c);
- an obligation of any other specified relation (such as a grandparent, a grandchild, an uncle or aunt, a niece or nephew) towards a vulnerable person.

Any such declaration made by one Contracting State will give rise to mutual obligations between that State and any other Contracting State which has made an equivalent declaration (Art. 2(3)).

(C) Maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons which cannot be brought within the scope of the Convention

It may well be that most recognised maintenance obligations towards vulnerable persons come within categories (A) and (B) above. However, some countries may recognise circumstances in which a maintenance obligation towards a vulnerable person is placed on a person or a body with no family relationship with the vulnerable person. Indeed, it is part of the purpose of this Questionnaire to discover the extent to which such obligations exist.

(D) The 2000 Adults Convention does not apply to maintenance obligations per se

Even though the 2000 Adults Convention does not apply to maintenance obligations per se, it is applicable to the issue of powers of representation which would include provisions to make arrangements for the international recovery of maintenance on behalf of the adult who is not in a position to protect his or her interests. For example, in accordance with Article 15 of the 2000 Convention, the law of the adult's habitual residence at the time of the agreement or act, unless one of the laws mentioned in Article 15(2) has been designated expressly in writing, would govern the existence, extent, modification and extinction of powers of representations. Article 16 which provides for the withdrawal or modification of powers of representation by measures taken by an authority having jurisdiction under the 2000 Convention would also be applicable.

In the light of this background, the objectives of the Questionnaire are:

- (1) to learn more from States concerning maintenance provisions under domestic laws in respect of vulnerable persons;
- (2) to identify any special rules which may need to be added to the 2007 Child Support Convention, by way of a protocol, with regard to those maintenance obligations in respect of vulnerable persons which are within or are capable of being brought within the scope of the Convention; and
- (3) to identify any categories of maintenance obligations towards vulnerable persons which at the moment cannot be brought within the scope of the Convention.

The relevant legislation is

Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act 1976, as amended;

Family Law Act 1995;

Family Law (Divorce) Act 1996.

Maintenance orders for the benefit of a dependent child are usually available only as ancillary relief on the separation or divorce of the parents.
